FINALLY: WE ALL WENT to Eden Park where the Police and firemen kept watch over us through the day and the nigth. In what once was known as Eden Park water tower are Station X of the police and the alarm system of the firemen.

Mr. Jones for the firemen and Mr. Hearne for the police explained the complicated technique of electricity and electronics but all we could understand was that the policemen and firemen are no more than a telephone wire away from us when needed. On the instant the call to a fire is communicated from Eden Park to the engine house and its firemen who should be going to that fire. On the instant Station X, by radio, is telling police cars to get to that house that has just been burglarized.

Chief Stanley Schrotel was there and he gave a speech on how to call for the help of Station X. We learned from the chief to control our emotions when we call Station X. There have been those who have called Station X for help and have rung off, forgetting to give the address, and what can the police do then, when they don't know where to go from there?
